COURSE DESCRIPTION

Traditionally, domestic politics has been viewed as the domain of “government” – in contrast to the relatively “ungoverned” realm of international affairs. This distinction provided a rationale for treating international relations as a separate field of study. It also informed the development of national bureaucracies in which the management of international relations fell to a specialized diplomatic service, leaving most departments and agencies to concentrate on domestic affairs.

Since the end of World War II, however, and particularly since the end of the Cold War, globalization has been eroding the boundary between domestic and international or global affairs. On one hand, the globalization of commerce, markets, investment, production, technology, information, communities, criminal networks, pollution and infectious diseases has given rise to a growing array of regulatory structures at the international or global level which, in various ways, perform “governance” functions that have historically been associated with the role of the state. At the same time, many traditionally domestic policy areas – from social welfare to environmental policies – are now subject to global pressures and influences.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

The purpose of this course is to investigate both of the above-mentioned trends and, in so doing, to provide students with a greater understanding of the growing interconnection between the domestic and the international or global policy realms.

TEACHING APPROACH

The course will consist of lectures as well as class and online discussions. Given that an important portion of the course will be devoted to in-class discussions, it is very important for students to do the required readings before class and, obviously, to be present in class.

Suggested readings are for those students who want to deepen their understanding of a particular theme or issue studied in class. They can be especially useful for essays, research papers, exams and major research papers.

The course's content rests on readings and, in some instances, case studies. Each session is based on two pillars: (1) presentation of concepts and the different arguments offered by the literature; (2) analysis and critical discussion of the literature.

ASSESSMENT

➤ Short Critical Analyses:	20%
➤ Mid-term Exam:	30%
➤ Final Exam:	35%
➤ Participation:	15%

Short Critical Analyses (20%)

Each student will write two (2) short critical analyses, which consist of choosing a newspaper or magazine article and critically analysing its content (in terms of argument, empirical evidence, conclusions, policy implications, etc.) using the course readings and lectures. The analysis should take the form of an essay. These short critical analyses can be handed in anytime during the semester and will be returned to the student a week later with comments. The newspaper or magazine article being analysed should accompany the essay.

Students have the possibility to write a third assignment if they are not satisfied with their grade on one of the previous two assignments. This means that only the two best critical analyses will count towards the final grade.

The marking key for the short critical analyses is available on Blackboard Vista.

Document Format

- 5 pages maximum (including figures, tables and bibliography)
- Double spaced
- Font 12 pt New Times Roman or equivalent

Mid-term Exam (30%)

The mid-term exam is a two (2) hour in-class exam that will take place on session #7 (February 28, 2012). It covers material seen during sessions 1 to 6. A list of 6 or 7 questions will be handed at the end of session #6. At the beginning of the exam, three questions will be selected at random and students will answer two out of the three selected questions.

Take-home Final Exam (35%)

The take-home final exam consists of a research paper that analyses, from both theoretical and empirical perspectives, the governance of a particular international or domestic policy issue that is influenced by globalization. The paper should be based on extensive research and should answer a clearly-identified research question relating to globalization and governance. Students are strongly encouraged to meet with the instructor to discuss their proposed topic and approach.

The take-home final exam is due before April 17, 2012 at 4pm; it should be handed in hard copy as well as by e-mail at pleblond@uottawa.ca. Only the e-mailed copy will count towards the deadline (see below).

(Note: There is a penalty for late submissions. The penalty corresponds to a 5% reduction of the paper's grade for every hour that passes after the deadline until the paper is submitted. University regulation say that work handed in late must be accompanied by a medical certificate in order to avoid any penalty. In case of illness or health-related problems, only medical certificates from the University of Ottawa's counseling services and health clinic (located at 100 Marie-Curie) are recognized as being officially valid. The Faculty has the right to accept or refuse any justification for lateness that is not health related. Reasons like travels, work or personal mistakes in reading exam schedules or syllabi are not generally accepted.)

Document Format:

- 12 pages maximum (including tables and figures)
- Bibliography is provided on separate page(s) at the end of the text
- Double-spaced
- Font 12 pt New Times Roman or equivalent

Participation (15%)

The participation grade will be a function of the following criteria:

- Presence in class (50%)
- Active participation in class discussions and the online forum (50 %)

For information about writing papers and exams as well as other helpful tools advice, please consult the following website: <http://www.sciencesociales.uottawa.ca/USB/cleusbkey.swf>.

Be Aware of Academic Fraud!

Academic fraud is an act committed by a student and it can negatively effect your school evaluation (with respect to assignments, tests, exams, etc.). It is not tolerated by the University. Anyone found guilty of fraud will be liable to severe penalties.

Here are some examples of academic fraud:

- Plagiarize or cheat in any way;
- Present falsified research data;
- Submission of an assignment that, in part or in entirety, you are not the author of;
- Presentation of, without the written permission of the professor(s) concerned, the same work from another course.

Over the years, the perfection of the Internet has strongly facilitated the discovery of cases of plagiarism. The tools that are at the disposal of your professors permit, with the help of only a few words, to retrace the origin of a text on the Web.

For more information on fraud and how to avoid it, you can refer to the Faculty web page, which offers tips to help you with your studies and the writing process for university level projects at the following address: http://www.socialsciences.uottawa.ca/eng/ugrad\_tips.asp. You can also refer to the Faculty web page for information on plagiarism and university assignments: <http://www.socialsciences.uottawa.ca/eng/ethics.asp>.

The person who committed or attempts to commit academic fraud or who was an accomplice will be punished. Here are some examples of sanctions that could be imposed:

- The assignment or course in question will receive a grade of “F”;
- An additional requirement will be added to the program of study (3 to 30 credits);
- Suspension or expulsion from the Faculty.

Over the past session, the majority of people found guilty of fraud received an “F” in their course and will need to obtain three to twelve extra credits in their program of study.

You may refer to the following address to find the regulations: http://www.uottawa.ca/academic/info/newsletter/fraud\_e.html

Resources for youMentoring Centre* - <http://www.sciencesociales.uottawa.ca/mentor/fra/>

The goal of the Mentoring Centre is to help students with their academic and social well being during their time at the University of Ottawa. Regardless of where a student stands academically, or how far along they are in completing their degree, the mentoring centre is there to help students continue on their path to success.

A student may choose to visit the mentoring centre for very different reasons. Younger students may wish to talk to their older peers to gain insight into programs and services offered by the University, while older student may simply want to brush up on study and time management skills or learn about programs and services for students nearing the end of their degree.

In all, the Mentoring Centre offers a place for students to talk about concerns and problems that they might have in any facet of their lives. While students are able to voice their concerns and problems without fear of judgment, mentors can garner further insight in issues unique to students and find a more practical solution to better improve the services that the Faculty of Social Sciences offers, as well as the services offered by the University of Ottawa.

Career Services* - <http://www.sass.uottawa.ca/careers/>
